GENERAL NEWS.

An Exciting Affray.

L[illegible] sit ex U. S. marshal, who has ba[illegible] more moonshiners than any man in the country, was fatally wounded by Joe Cunningham and Da[illegible] nell [illegible] Wyatt [illegible] celebrate[illegible] nerve and is one who has never known fear. He has had many exciting incidents in his life and has shot several men, but generally was acting in self defense in the discharge of his [illegible] ment [illegible]. The difficulty commenced in the A[illegible] House, a little hotel directly opposite [illegible] house and ended in the street where Wyatt was shot. The origin of the difficulty was witnessed by none but the parties [illegible] what [illegible] that warrants were out for the arrest of Wyatt [illegible] ing him with selling liquor to [illegible]. Hearing of this he swore he would pay no attention to the warrants. He would [illegible] and pay the fines and no other could arrest him. He is said to have threatened [illegible] who laid hands on him. The officers attempted to arrest him when he pulled a revolver. The officers did the same and the battle raged from the hotel to the street. The marshal fired 10 out of the 14 shots. Wyatt fired 4 times with his famous pistol which he calls "Trusty." Neither of the marshals were hurt except that Connelly's forehead was grazed by a bullet just over the right ear. Doctors Garvin, Rodgers and others were called into the jail to attend Wyatt, who was found to be very seriously injured. The probabilities are that he will die. He has three wounds so far as the doctors can determine. One is in the right shoulder and not serious. The other two, or one, are in the abdomen. There is one hole on the right side and another on the left, and the doctors are unable to say whether the holes are the entrance and exit of the same ball. If but one wound he has a chance for recovery, but if two bullets are in the body the doctors say death is almost certain. The shooting created intense excitement in the vicinity and a large crowd gathered.

The Government not Defeated.

CHICAGO, Feb 21.—Mr. J. Johnson of the post office department, who has been at Lincoln, Neb., directing the initial proceedings against the star routers, is here, and in an interview said the admission that these star routers will escape punishment, or that the government has failed, is entirely wrong. The first indictment was that the accused had entered into a conspiracy to defraud the government; second that they had made false returns. The trial was upon the first indictment, and when the government found that Cleary, one of the conspirators upon whom they relied to convict others, had played them false, prosecution dismissed the suit upon the indictment, leaving themselves free to prosecute cases for making false returns in the May term of court.

Railroad Attached.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 20.—An attachment has been issued at the instance of Thomas Reynolds of London, against the Indianapolis and Evansville railroad, to recover $170,250, claimed on contract for steel rails. There is in the customhouse here property valued at $140,000, with unpaid customs of $60,000, and the attachment was laid in the hands of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., said to hold the bills of lading.

A Point for Duelists.

RICHMOND, Feb. 20.—In Hanover county court counsel opposed the examination by the grand jury of a witness, on the ground that the evidence while it may serve to fasten guilt on the principals of a duel, would tend to criminate themselves as participants. The court decided the point well taken and discharged the witnesses. The result is no presentments could be made by the grand jury.

Legislative Proceedings.

In the senate the president pro tem explained he was wrong in ruling that debate on the motion to lay on the table was admissible. Riddleberger's motion to lay on the table a joint order having for its object the election of certain state officers was adopted. Another joint motion was then offered, fixing Wednesday next for election of all officers. A number of senators entered a protest against the ruling of the chair.

High Water in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Feb 20.—The Evening Post's special from Henderson says: The river is all over the bottom lands and is the highest since 1847. It extends back six miles from the banks. A swift current rushes through the bend above Henderson on the Stanley farm. News from the interior of Kentucky and Indiana report rain for the past 30 hours.

The High Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Feb 20.—It has been raining hard all day and is raining to-night with the prospect of continuing. The river is rising at the rate of an inch per hour and is already the highest it has been since 1847. Indications give cause to fear it will exceed the rise of 1850, the greatest on record. Navigation is closed.

Heavy Storm at Council Bluffs.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Feb 20.—A heavy snow storm prevails here to-day and to-night, the first of the winter. It is expected the running of trains will be interfered with by drifting snow.

Found to be a Forger.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 21.—Gottlieb Engel, the well known young attorney of this city, and connected by marriage with prominent and wealthy Jewish families in Chicago and Cincinnati, who has been on trial for forgery, was found guilty to-day.

The New York Coalition.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—The senate committees are so arranged as to secure to Tammany and the republicans a majority, if these elements see fit to unite.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Parliamentary Proceedings.

LONDON, Feb 20.—Gladstone said legislation in the United States had found expedient measures restricting discussion and they had never worked badly.

Sir Stafford Northcote said the first resolution might be useful to cure individuals, but as it would destroy freedom of debate and of voting, a great evil would be done for the sake of a little good. Everything that restricted freedom of debate in the house of commons would give a greater handle to the house of lords in dealing freely with measures which they would say were the outcome of free debate.

Gladstone Ahead.

LONDON, Feb 20.—In the house of commons this evening Gladstone moved a suspension of orders of the day for the introduction of the rules of procedure. The opposition warmly opposed the motion, but the orders of the day were finally suspended without division. Gladstone, in moving the cloture, modified the numbers in the resolution so that cloture must be supported by 100 votes when the majority is 200.

Will not Participate.

In the house this morning Earl Granville, secretary of state for foreign affairs, announced that he and his colleagues did not feel justified in participating in the proceedings of the committee to examine the working of the land act.

The Russian Outrages.

LONDON, Feb 21.—The British consular reports tend to extenuate the seriousness of the anti Jewish riots in Russia. Loss of life and outrages on women are generally denied, but destruction of Jewish property is fully confirmed. The statement is confirmed that about 100 Jews were shamefully maltreated at Warsaw, 10 or 12 of whom died of injuries.

Electric Lights in Great Houses.

(From the London Truth.)

The Duke of Sutherland is going to have Trentham illuminated with the electric light and I hear that the duke of Westminster contemplates introducing it at Eaton hall. It has been in operation at Alnwick castle for nearly a year past but it is not yet going to supersede the old methods of lighting at Windsor castle. The Waterloo chamber and St George's hall would look splendid with the light and so would the suites of drawing rooms in the private apartments and above all the grand corridor to which the queen's visitors assemble before dinner and where half an hour is passed after the meal before her majesty retires to her private rooms [illegible] the company adjourn to music and cards in one of the drawing rooms. An Abortion Case.

LOS ANGELES, Feb 21.—The examination of Dr. A. S. Shorb, charged with causing the death of Guadalupe Garcia by abortion, which has been in progress before City Judge Adams since the 11th inst., was concluded at noon to-day and the accused committed for trial on charge of murder. The case will probably be brought before the superior court to-morrow in action for writ of habeas corpus.

UTAH.

Treasonable Talk.

SALT LAKE, Feb 20.—The discourses at the tabernacle yesterday were unusually defiant and treasonable. Wells and Thatcher both spoke and defied and insulted the government. Thatcher said he would wander in the hills, if the Edmunds bill passed, and advised the Mormons to leave Utah as a last resort.

Will have None of It.

The Mormons are circulating a petition among their young people to make them deny that polygamy as practiced by their parents is not just what they desire and that they never objected to it. Those who refuse to sign are cut off from the church. The majority of the young people refuse to sign and say that the sooner the institution of Mormonism and polygamy is wiped out the better.

NEVADA.

Shooting Affray.

CANDELARIA, Feb 20.—About 10.10 this morning a shooting affray occurred at this place between T. F. Shepherd, watchman at the Mount Potosi mine, and Joseph McLaine, both well known citizens of Candelaria. Twelve or fifteen shots were fired and both men dangerously wounded. Shepherd was shot about the right breast, and McLaine wounded in the right side. The difficulty grew out of a quarrel over a game of cards. Both were under the influence of liquor.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Narrow Escape from Drowning.

KAMLOOPS, Feb 17.—Yesterday afternoon the mail sleigh with four horses attached broke through the ice about 200 yards from the shore of Cranquille and in less than two minutes horses, sleigh and everything went under. One passenger, Geo. Stuart, jumped from the sleigh and got on firm ice. J. B. Leighton, who was driving, went for the mail bags and one bag was got out with great difficulty. Leighton was in the water with heavy clothing on but he managed to get out and jumped back into the sleigh for the other bag containing the Victoria mail. It was very heavy but he got a good hold of it and jumped with it. The bag reached the firm ice but he went into the water again. Keeping cool, however, he managed to get out. The wind was blowing a hurricane and the thermometer was 10 degrees below zero. About half a mile behind them was a two horse cutter with S. Tingley and A. Vanvolkenburg as occupants, seeing the fate of the mail sleigh, changed their course and tried another route. Mr. Cooney seeing the danger went and met Mr. Tingley and got into the cutter with them. After driving a short distance they broke through, Cooney, Tingley and the horses struggling in the water for dear life. Mr. Cooney was first out and then rendered all the help possible to Mr. Tingley, who was heavily clothed and was in the water fifteen minutes. An Indian ran to their assistance and lying down flat on the ice reached out and got hold of Mr. Tingley by the wrist and managed to keep him afloat until with the help of Cooney he was got out very much exhausted. The horses got their heads on the ice and kept up for an hour or more but finally went under with cutter and all. Vanvolkenburg has one ear and four fingers frozen, Stewart one hand, Cooney three fingers and Leighton both ears badly frozen.

Victoria Notes.

VICTORIA, Feb 21.—The police magistrate to-day fined D. McMillen, an American, $25 for carrying a revolver.

The remains of Father LeRoy were laid in state for two days at the Roman Catholic cathedral and were buried to-day at Saanich.

The steamship Hylton Castle passed with coal last night.

The Drummer Affliction.

From the Harrisburg Disseminator, 18th inst.

THE OREGONIAN has opened the fight on this class and is raising quite a breeze about its ears in consequence. We are pleased to note the fact that so influential a moulder of public opinion as our leading newspaper on this coast has taken up the cudgel against this nefarious system, and hope they will keep it up until a reform is brought about. The idea that it is the proper mode of doing business to make the farmer and laboring man, who toil from daylight until dark for one dollar a day, pay two or three hundred men from eight to ten dollars per day and expenses, just to travel up and down the country soliciting orders from the merchants that could just as well be made without their invaluable assistance is perfectly preposterous, and the sooner the wholesalers and merchants arrive at the conclusion the better for them, for it is a fact that the people are beginning to form that opinion and will eventually act upon it.

There is another phase to this commercial traveler business which THE OREGONIAN has not touched upon yet and that is the morality of that class of individuals. It is most assuredly a fact that it does not rank very high. While we know that there are many excellent men engaged in that business, we also know that perhaps, a majority of them are quite the reverse; that the inmates of the houses of ill fame can—very many of them—trace their down fall to this very class of men. They present such a fair exterior, and wag such a flattering tongue, and possess such a suave manner, and drive such a fine livery rig—at the expense of the working man—that it is no wonder the unsophisticated maiden is captivated and her ruin accomplished. But the influence they exert on general society is even a worse feature than the special cases we hint at. Even if no such dire results happen, the seeds of social immorality are scattered broadcast by them and spring up and bear bountiful harvests. These are facts that cannot be denied, and it is high time that a movement was made in the matter to arrest the evil tendencies of the system.

The vast amount paid to the drummer can just as well be saved to the farmer as not and it is with the successful merchant of the future to see that it is done.

Romance in a Bonaparte Marriage.

From the London Truth.

Mlle. Jeanne Bonaparte receives a dowry of 3,000,000 francs from her brother Rowland and his wife. The Marquis de Villeneuve Lalapon, to whom she is engaged, belongs to an old and very honorable family in Provence. He did not expect when he came forward as a suitor [illegible]. He and she became acquainted through Mr. William Wyse. The Marquis de Villeneuve was asked by Mr. Wyse to write [illegible] poems in the Provencal dialect, and Jeanne, who draws and paints admirably, was to illustrate them. WASHINGTON NEWS.

Col. Bliss Says the Star Route Men will be Punished.

THEIR TEMPORARY SUCCESS WILL PROVE UNAVAILING.

Secretary Freeman Completely Exonerated and Custodian Pitney Censured by the Committee of Investigation.

Col. Bliss on Star Route Indictments.

[illegible] Bliss stated that the grand jury was that in its finding [illegible] merits of the case. One juror had some doubts as to the application of the statute of limitation in several cases, but none whatever as to the propriety of returning indictments. Bliss regarded the unanimous action of the grand jury as a vindication of the administration of justice in the district of Columbia and, second, as a vindication of the administration of President Arthur, who has insisted from the first that justice should have full sway in these cases and the guilty should be punished; and third, vindication of the prosecution, and in a minor sense of myself, for I have said all along that these parties ought to be indicted and believed they would.

I never saw any case in which the evidence was collected with as much energy, intelligence and ability. That credit does not belong to me nor to any of the prosecution, but to the inspectors of the post office department who gathered this testimony [illegible] of the west. There has been some criticism of the apparent delay of the prosecution but I was at it for months working on an average not less than sixteen hours per day, selecting and deciding upon witnesses to be called. For instance, in one case in Washington territory there were two witnesses familiar with all the facts on the lower end of the route and two who were as familiar with the important facts on the other end. We concluded finally not to call either of these witnesses, but some one who knew really less about the routes than the others but whose knowledge related to the route. We called him in order to recognize the witnesses before the grand jury. The aggregate payments to them for fees and mileage were $100,000. The prosecution will call about 150 witnesses.

"When do you expect to get to trial?" asked the reporter.

"Well, if the defendants honestly desire a speedy trial we can begin in a little while. It will require ten days to draw up the indictments. They are being prepared by Mr. Kerr in the attorney general's office. The government witnesses who appeared before the grand jury have been allowed to go home to prevent the hardship which remaining on one dollar and a quarter per day would have been to them. Some witnesses came 4700 miles." Bliss seems naturally very much gratified at the action of the grand jury and says he [illegible] the foreman an[illegible] jury against finding any indictments that would result in failure.

Before June he says the government would institute civil suits against various mail contractors who are believed to have profited by star routes. Wherever there is reason to believe they have proper [illegible] of contract they can't be proceeded against, but Bliss says the government intends to make determined effort to recover a part, at least, of the money illegally taken from it and paid contractors. The action of the grand jury was a great surprise to the accused and their counsel for defense said to-night it was a small matter anyhow, as they had a view that would demolish the prosecution as soon as the cases went into court. He declined to state, however, what this view was. Col. Bliss says there is no question whatever but that all cases will come within the statute of limitation.

[illegible] The speaker, however, selected Burrows (republican), of Michigan, who had also voted against the motion. Page advanced to take his position and deliberately violated the rule which prohibits debate on such a motion by saying with a volume of voice that was heard above a dozen calls to order throughout the house: "This bill was assigned for consideration once by unanimous consent but it was crowded over and this motion is to fix another day. We shall see whether this house intends to carry out in good faith the provisions of the treaty as all political parties in this country have from time to time pledged themselves to do." Representatives favoring and those opposed to the resolution successively filed between them. At length there was no more to count and the tellers announced that 83 members had voted in the affirmative, and 27 in the negative, and Speaker Keifer was about to declare the resolution adopted, when Ellis, democrat, of Louisiana, vociferated a point of order that no quorum had voted. The speaker was thus obliged to direct the tellers to resume their places and to call upon all members who had not already voted to pass between them. Then ensued a long period of delay and no little anxiety for friends of the bill, while Pacific coast members rushed around the chamber and reached the cloak rooms and other lounging places to drum and hurry them forward, and vote, the speaker from time to time seconding their efforts by reminding the house it was the duty of every member to vote one way or the other, and still the total fell short of the quorum, and the usual hour for adjournment was drawing ominously nigh. Finally, however, the speaker announced that 118 members had voted in the affirmative against 31 in the negative. Votes were equally divided between republicans and democrats. Ellis, who has lately split off from his party on various independent issues in Louisiana, and therefore is not recognized as a democrat in good standing, was joined in his opposition to Chinese by King and one or two others of Louisiana colleagues. More than an equal number of Massachusetts republicans united with those of Louisiana on this occasion and Ketcham, republican, of New York, was also conspicuous in the opposition. On the whole, however, the more prominent members of the house, without exception, either voted affirmatively or refrained from voting. The result adds confidence to the expectation that the bill when reached for action will command a large majority and be passed in the house without very much difficulty.

The Lapsed Land Grants.

With regard to lapsed land grants the Mail and Express Washington special says: It is now evident that there will soon be a stir in congress on this subject. The Northern Pacific railroad people have planted their lobby on the ground and show considerable nervousness as to the issue. The judiciary committees of both houses have the whole subject under consideration and it is intimated by prominent members thereof they intend to see the government's interests protected at all hazards. In this relation one of the members says they intend to inquire carefully into the question whether the decision of Carl Schurz, while he was secretary of interior, overruling the decision of the land office commissioner, was the result of ignorance of law, favoritism or venality. Some pretty rough things are said about Schurz in this connection and they will all be investigated with the general subject, and if any of them are substantiated a bill will be passed directing the attorney general to add all lapsed railroad grants to the public domain. The Northern Pacific people appeal for mercy on the ground that they have the entire road under contract for construction and that they will complete it in two years.

Senator Miller's Bill.

The [illegible] foreshadowed in last night's dispatches [illegible] the Grant retirement bill debarred Gen. Miller from any chance of getting his Chinese bill before the senate to-day but he will continue to seek an opportunity to-morrow and if not successful then will persevere until his object is accomplished.

Will try a New Plan.

Senator Fair and Representative Cassidy, finding that the judiciary committees of their respective houses are not favorably inclined to the proposition to place Judge Hillyer of Nevada on the judicial retired list, will to-morrow introduce a bill providing for the appointment of an additional United States district judge for Nevada, which would effect the same purpose in perhaps a more acceptable way.

Call's Resolution.

Senator Call's resolution relative to polygamy quotes from the constitution and says the sections of the congress enacting any law by which persons not ascertained guilty of a criminal act shall be deprived or denied any rights or privileges or immunities conferred by law on other citizens.

Gen. Barnes' Retirement.

The retirement of Surgeon General Barnes hangs fire. It is said in expectation of the passage of a bill to provide for his retirement as major general. This action is proposed as an acknowledgment of his services during the illness of President Garfield which will otherwise be unpaid.

Logan Providing for his Relatives.

W. F. Tucker, who was to-day nominated for the vacant position of major and paymaster, is Senator Logan's son in law, and is now in business in Chicago. He was wealthy a few years ago, but has lost his fortune.

Senate Confirmations.

U. S. marshals—Thos. Boles, for western district of Arkansas, and Henry P. Denny for Minnesota; register of the land office, D. P. Hall, at Benson, Minn.; postmaster, James Cogswell at Iberville, La.

Sherman Exonerated.

The minority report of the contingent fund investigating committee will entirely exonerate Secretary Sherman and censure Custodian Pitney and his friends whom Secretary Folger removed.

Commissions Signed.

The president has signed the commissions of John W. Flynn, consul to Chemnitz; J. W. Harper to Munich; W. E. Moreland to Belize, Honduras, and E. L. Smithers to Smyrna.

Adjourned too Soon.

The senate adjourned without a vote on the pension arrears resolution, consequently Miller got no opportunity to move to take up the Chinese bill.

A SOLDIERS' LAND BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

If congress, instead of devising pension bills of doubtful value, would pass a land bill giving to every honorably discharged soldier a warrant for 160 acres of government land, it would do that which would not only be just to many old soldiers but of benefit to the country. The soldiers of 1812 received land grants, by which many of them were enabled to secure homes who otherwise would never have been able to do so. There are hundreds of men who served during the war of the rebellion who are [illegible] the call of patriotism [illegible] in limb or broken in health should receive liberal pensions from a grateful people, yet their more fortunate comrades, those who passed through the [illegible] unscathed, should receive some fitting acknowledgment of their services. What better could the government offer than a patent for a portion of the land their valor saved to freedom and nationality? I really believe congress could do nothing more acceptable to the soldiers and the people at large than to pass such an act. The homestead law gives the ex soldier but little advantage over the alien who has just declared his intention of becoming a citizen. Corporations receive grand subsidies of land. As the present land laws exist speculators and land sharks grow fat off the public domain, and Uncle Sam is being robbed of thousands of acres of the most desirable lands.

Against an enactment of this kind it is urged that but few of the soldiers would be benefited; that it would most benefit land speculators and brokers. I think this could easily be guarded against by a well considered bill. Let the warrants issue to the soldier or his heirs, the right and title to said warrants to dwell only with the soldier or his heirs for a period of say five years, after which they might be transferred. This would enable those who wished to locate their warrants and receive their patent, after which those who would might sell their warrant. It might be further provided that any one who sought to locate a warrant to which he was not entitled by service or inheritance should be required to live upon and cultivate the land so located a specified length of time before receiving a patent therefor. It is evident that such safeguards could be thrown around an act of this kind as would prevent any abuse of its provisions by persons not entitled to its benefits. There appears to be a growing desire on part of the ex-soldiers and their friends to close up the pension lists and pass an act of this kind. I should not be surprised if the present congress is largely petitioned in favor of such a law. With a number of old soldiers in either house to carefully look after the interests of their late comrades in arms, the present congress should be able to perfect and pass an acceptable bill. Why not do it?

EUROPEANS MUST PEOPLE AFRICA.

From the London Times.

In a just published paper by Dr. A. Corre, a French physician, the author discusses a great array of data on the subject of the acclimatization of the native races of Africa and comes to some conclusion of great moment in connection with the future of that continent. Dr. Corre shows that in temperate climates like that of North America the negro has shown himself possessed of a genuine capacity of acclimatization. In tropical countries, however, such as the West Indies, Africans have proved themselves incapable of maintaining their numbers and have moreover become demoralized and incapable of efficient labor except under slavery. Even in tropical Africa itself the native, Dr. Corre maintains, is unable [illegible] great mortality [illegible] sufficient proportion [illegible] most fertile regions the highest degree of civilization he is able to attain is a state of semi barbarism, under the influence of [illegible] Islamism [illegible]

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb 21.

[illegible] having pawned his sword wasn't true. He would rather than do so starve [illegible] had been one of that officer's supporters in the effort for his retirement, and wrote a letter in his behalf which was widely published at the time. The report what had been said on that score did not apply to himself. Gen. Logan seemed afraid that [illegible] might be humiliated, but that gentleman ought to be the judge on that point, and [illegible] would say as a recognition of the services of the distinguished beneficiary that his retirement would be considered by him as an honor.

Butler suggested that in this consideration similar provision should be made for Gens. Franklin, McClellan, and other distinguished soldiers.

Logan admitted the propriety of any proposition to that effect.

Vest disclaimed any prejudice against Gen. Grant or any other union soldier. To say he or any of his associates who had been identified with the confederacy entertained a mean and contemptible jealousy against a man because he had conquered them in open fight was simply a most personal reflection to which he would not reply.

The bill comes up again to-morrow.

Hale from the census committee reported favorably the house apportionment bill and asked unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Cockrell objected as the senator had not had a chance to read it.

Hale said the committee were unanimous in support of the measure, and urged that no time be lost, as several state legislatures were awaiting congressional action.

Cockrell withdrew his objection and Hale said he would renew his motion later.

Dawes presented a petition in behalf of Indians, and said congress should recognize the universal demand of wealthy and intelligent citizens for just treatment of Indians.

The pension arrears resolution was taken up and McPherson offered and advocated a substitute declaring that the senate should adhere to the principle that pensions shall be computed from the time of disability, and asking the pensions committee to bring in a bill by which the business of the pension bureau may be expedited and frauds detected and punished.

Executive session interrupted discussion, and when the doors opened senate adjourned.

House.

McKinley of Ohio, from the committee on ways and means, moved to suspend the rules and pass a joint resolution refunding the American revisers of the new testament the duties paid on copies of the new revised testament for use of the company; agreed to and the bill passed.

Bill authorizing payment of Japanese indemnity fund $1,770,340 to the Japanese government, with the exception of $251,000, which shall be paid to officers and crew of the United States ship Wyoming, passed amid applause.

House then took a recess until evening session for consideration of the district of Columbia code bill.

Hewitt, rising to a question of privilege, referred to the recently published letter of Jacob R. Shepherd to Minister Hurlburt of Peru, and to the use of his (Hewitt's) name as one of the gentlemen with whom Shepherd claimed confidential negotiations. As he was the only member whom Shepherd included in his list of names it was proper to say he did not know Shepherd, had never known him, and the use of his name by Shepherd was entirely without his knowledge or consent. He was also authorized in behalf of August Belmont to make a similar disclaimer.

At 4:15 P. M., on motion of Page, the house suspended its rules and adopted a resolution making the Chinese immigration bill a special order for the second Tuesday of March, and from day to day thereafter until finally disposed of, but not to interfere with consideration of general appropriation bills. Vote on adoption of the resolution was 118 against 31.

The Mary Taylor will carry a United States pilot's flag and will be known as a pilot schooner.

There are 51 school districts in Walla Walla county. The February apportionment of the public funds amounted to $7045 65, being $2 35 per scholar. On account of the extended time for the collection of territorial taxes, which extension was granted on account of the prevalence of smallpox in certain portions of the territory, only about one third of the general tax fund had been paid in at the time the apportionment was made, hence it was unusually small.

Times will be lively indeed in the sealing business at Cape Flattery this season. The schooner Emily Stevens, Capt. Oliver, has arrived there to operate for Mr. Gallick. The Annie E. Briggs is also on hand in the interest of the same party. These, with the schooner Seventy-six, form Gallick's fleet. The Endora, Capt. Williams, has been chartered by J. A. Martin, of Hoko, and will also enter the scramble for seals. Opposition in securing Indians and canoes is so lively that contractors are paying a bonus of $10.

Whittington Entertains a King.

From the Saturday Review.

The early part of Whittington's career is involved in comparative obscurity. His public life is clear enough, for he figures in the annals of the city during a long period as an important merchant and civic officer, and served as lord mayor in 1396 and 1397, and again in the year 1419. In 1416 he was returned as member of parliament for the city. [illegible] was in his last mayoralty that Whittington entertained Henry of Agincourt and his queen. "The magnificence of this banquet astonished both the king and his bride; probably there was not in all England and France together another man who could have provided such a banquet. * * * * Even the fires were fed with cedar and perfumed wood. When Catherine spoke of it, the mayor proposed to feed the flames with something still more costly and valuable, and in fact he threw into the fire the king's own bonds to the amount of £60,000. Among the bonds were some, to the amount of 10,000 marks, due to the Mercers' company; one of 1500 marks, due to the chamber of London; one of 2000 marks, belonging to the grocers, and all Whittington's private loans and advances. It is probable," says Mr. Besant, "that in burning these bonds the mayor acted by previous agreement of the city, but if not—if he took on himself the loans due to the companies—he made a most splendid and princely gift. The sum of £60,000 advanced by one man would, even in these days, be considered enormous, in those days it can hardly be reckoned at less than a million and a quarter of our present money." Sir Richard Whittington died in 1423, leaving to the city which he had served so long and so well an immense number of munificent benefactions, which serve to keep his memory green until the present day. In the course of the work which Mr. Walter Besant devotes to the life and legend of the famous lord mayor he gives some most interesting details about the ancient city life and history, a notice of which we reserve for another occasion. In the meantime we have seldom met with a pleasanter memoir than that from which the facts given above are extracts, and if the legend loses something of its more romantic features the true story is an interesting contribution to archaeological knowledge and an excellent example of a good and useful life.

THE POSTAL SAVINGS BILL.

The national postal savings bill as perfected by the house committee on postoffices provides:

For the establishment of postal savings depositories for the purpose of the protection of small savings, to facilitate their withdrawal, and to produce revenue.

The postmaster-general may open sub-depositories at any money-order office in his discretion.

Any person above 12 years of age may become a depositor.

A book is to be provided containing ten stamps, the aggregate value of which is to be $3.

The smallest deposit which the government will take is to be $3.

After that deposit has been made additional deposits will be received in $1 or its multiples.

Interest is to be computed at the central office in Washington upon all sums of $3, and even multiples, at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum. This is to be computed for every calendar month.

Money when deposited may be withdrawn by depositors without previous notice, but interest is to be only allowed at the end of the calendar month.

The money received from the deposits is to be invested by the secretary of the treasury in interest-bearing securities of the United States, or, in case the money cannot be invested in this class of securities, it shall be invested in approved state securities, but not in railroad or other bonds.

Each individual account is to be kept at Washington, and every withdrawal is to be made by check from Washington, and upon the depositories designated by the depositors.

The withdrawals are to be paid from the central office by draft to the order of the depositors, at the depository requested by him.

These deposits are to be free from United States, state, or local taxation.

No person can deposit more than $100 during a period of thirty days, and the aggregate amount allowed to any single depositor is not to exceed $500.

Friends of the measure argue in its favor that $918,048,519—the figures are from an official source—is hoarded away or carried in the pockets of the people of the United States. It is thus idly held for the want of safe or convenient places to deposit it. In the eastern states there are numerous savings banks and institutions which have some system of government; but in the west the people have been so seriously plundered by such banks that no one has faith in their security or honesty. To this lack of savings banks having the confidence of the people is attributed the large private hoardings of gold coin and greenbacks. Should this bill become a law the convenience of savings banks will be brought to the doors of the people. When three dollars have been deposited, it, with additions thereto, will bear interest, and the United States treasury will become responsible therefor. The money may be drawn at any time with the accrued interest.

There are indications of strong opposition to the bill on the part of the representatives from the eastern states. They argue that it is not needed; that savings banks already exist where there is a demand for them, and that managers of these banks can invest the savings of the poor to better advantage than that class can do for itself; that building and loan associations take the place of savings banks in Philadelphia and several central cities, and that in the south there is very little money to be placed in savings banks. It is further argued that the postoffice department has all the business it can do. The fact that there have been gigantic stealings in the star route service is referred to as a reason why large trusts should not be imposed upon that service which is already overburdened and so subject to temptations. The bill, it is claimed, too, would create an army of new officials. The states-rights argument is also brought forward—that it is not within the function of the government to go into the savings bank business. Southern members say that they shall unite in support of an amendment to the bill increasing the amount of deposit that may be made during one month from $100 to $300 or $500. This is to enable southern laborers who receive their wages at the end of the season to make their deposits in bulk. This amendment was opposed in the committee on the ground that advantage would be taken of it to evade payment of taxes, as the deposits are non-taxable. Friends of the measure are very enthusiastic in its support and claim that they will easily carry it through.

A PROGRESSIVE REGION.

If one thing more than another shows the superiority of the country traversed by the Northern Pacific railroad it is the constant increase of immigration along its completed line. While the Central and Southern Pacific roads must depend upon through traffic for the bulk of their business, the northern rival is developing a region rich in every resource for the maintenance of a large and industrious population, the local traffic from which is certain to become a prime factor in its earnings at an early date. Dakota, Montana, Washington and Oregon, are each at present capable of sustaining a larger population than the entire territory comprised in Nevada, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico.

This fact is causing a remarkable immigration from older states and from Europe. Towns are springing up all over Dakota, boasting of their 500 to 2000 inhabitants, with schools, churches and banks—all within a single year. The wave is now breaking over into Montana, and enterprising speculators are advertising town lots in embryo cities far out on the Yellowstone, one hundred miles in advance of the track layers. No other transcontinental line is capable of such progress, and the fact is constantly becoming more apparent to the thousands of energetic and industrious people who are seeking new homes.

The commissioner of pensions has been before the house committee on pensions and presented facts and figures concerning the proposed granting of pensions to survivors of the Mexican war and various Indian wars. It is promised that the committee will take no definite action in this matter until the commissioner has another chance to be heard. The action of the committee and the statements of the commissioner should receive close attention. When the arrears of pension bill was before congress, official estimates of its probable cost to the country were solicited. When the estimated figures were laid before congress they received almost no attention. Members who "guessed" that they knew more about such matters than the secretary of the treasury or the commissioner of pensions ridiculed the notion that the bill would require more than $10,000,000 or $20,000,000 in addition to the regular pension list. Even these figures they asserted were extravagant. In defiance of all remonstrance this superficial view of the case prevailed and the bill passed. It is possible that the same trick will be played with the new pension job in spite of formidable official estimates of its cost.

A Dakota paper in speaking of the country being developed by the extension of the Northern Pacific road east and west, says there is no "boom" at the western end like that which is settling up Dakota and eastern Montana so rapidly. The reason for this is apparently not understood by that paper. There is no surplus population in Oregon and Washington to spare, as there is in the east, and the development of this end of the road must necessarily await that influx of immigration which is now producing the results boasted of by our neighbors across the Rockies.

The legislature of Wisconsin is laboring to re-establish capital punishment in that state for murder. It was abolished in that state over twenty years ago, and, although efforts are annually made to re-enact it, they have thus far been unsuccessful. The murder of President Garfield is said to have converted many of the Wisconsin people to the conviction that such fellows as Guiteau ought to swing.

President Villard has sent out an expert engineer and two surveyors to travel the whole line of the trans-continental route to report from observation on the best methods of providing elevators for farmers along the line from Oregon to Lake Superior. Some system is desired which will furnish farmers storage at every station, where necessary, for their wheat until they are ready to market it.

Guiteau's opinion that his name would go "thundering down the ages" would be materially modified could he but ascertain how nearly his name and fate have already been forgotten.

IN HIGH CLOVER.

Richard Jackson's Career at the Court of Wurtemburg—A Farmer's Son who Lives the Equal of Royalty.

Cincinnati Gazette.

We read in a late number of the Boston Herald a sketch of Richard M. Jackson, formerly of Steubenville, O., but who is now a German citizen and attached to the court of Carl of Wurtemberg. The writer knew Mr. Jackson when he was engaged in the American consulate in Stuttgart, but never dreamed that two short years would bring him to such exaltation and preferment, and rarely indeed, out of fairy books, do we meet such an exemplification of "luck." Mr. Jackson is now about thirty-five years of age with a fair share of personal appearance, and easy, and rather graceful manners. He was the son of a farmer, and spent his early years like most boys in his position. Having a decided taste for music he went to Stuttgart to cultivate his talents at the famous conservatory there. He made much progress, but having lamed his hand by undue practice, he gave up the idea of becoming a musician, and, being a good German scholar, he became assistant in the American consulate. When the writer knew him, he was leading a pleasant, easy life, in the beautiful capital of Wurtemburg. He had a number of friends among the officers of the garrison, with whom he was quite popular, and into whose somewhat exclusive circle his official position had gained him the entree. This life suited him, but seeing no prospect of being able to remain in Germany, he looked forward unwillingly to returning to the hard work and bustle of this country, so that the strange chance which caused him to attract the attention of the king, must have been even more welcome to him than to most Americans. It happened thus: Mr. Jackson daily went through the royal domain on his way to the consulate. There he frequently met the king, whom he always saluted most deferentially. The latter noticed him, and learned he was an American. Happening to want some one to read English with him, a message was sent to Mr. Jackson offering him the place. The young man was much astonished at such an offer, and from such a source, but as the office of "Reader to the King" was a new one at that court, he doubted its desirableness. Finding, however, that the king intended it to be a life position with good emoluments, he accepted. And if reports be true, Carl of Wurtemberg may be trusted. He is on the verge of sixty, modest and retiring in disposition, and his timidity, singular in one of his rank, may be attributed largely to the trials of his youth and childhood. His father, the late King Wilhelm, though a good ruler and brave soldier, was a man of ungovernable passions, and having conceived a bitter hatred to his second wife, the mother of the present king, he did everything in his power to unfit her son for the high position he was born to. When quite a youth an attempt was made to poison him by one of his uncles, as it was said at the time, with the consent of his father, but this charge has since been contradicted. King Wilhelm forbade, however, his son's being trained in any of the accomplishments befitting his rank. He surrounded him with the vilest associates of both sexes, and tutors selected for their depravity led him through the worst haunts of vice in Europe. But the boy's simple and honest nature saved him from the pitfalls laid for him, and he is to-day considered a kind, sympathetic, good man. Many are the stories the Stuttgarters tell of the time when Louis Napoleon was his companion, and how the latter failed in leading "our Carl" into wrong doing. While he was still crown prince he married the daughter of Nicholas, the Princess Olga of Russia, who was considered one of the most beautiful women in Europe, and one can still trace in the classic outlines of her features, though worn by ill health, some remains of the beauty which once made her so famous. She has the reputation of being proud and haughty—a not uncommon characteristic in the Romanovs—but it is certainly so with her "noblesse oblige," for she spends a great portion of her income in benevolent works, and many are the monuments to her philanthropy in and around Stuttgart. She furnished the means, during the Franco-Prussian war, for the first ambulance car they ever had in Germany, and all during that struggle she headed the ladies of Stuttgart in preparing clothing and what was needful for the soldiery. As Mr. Jackson stated in one of his recent letters, his duties throw him into the society of both their majesties. He has a suite of apartments splendidly furnished and connected by private doors with those of the king. He dines at the royal table. Certain horses of the king's very renowned stud are at his disposal, and lackeys in gorgeous liveries do his bidding. Wherever the king goes he accompanies him, on hunting expeditions to the Black Forest and elsewhere, on pleasure trips to his numerous palaces, and every summer is spent in the fairy like royal villa at Fredrickshofen on Lake Constance. A description in one of the German papers of a fete given by the king to the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria is lying before me. It took place last August, and reads like a tale from "the Arabian Nights." The emperor came down the lake in the steamer Wittelsbach, and was met by another steamer bearing Carl and his retinue, among whom was Mr. Jackson. It was a beautiful moonlight evening, and the lake was dotted with gondolas decked with colored lamps; from every peak of the surrounding mountains blazed huge bonfires, while on a mountain side bore in letters of fire, eighty meters long, the name "Francis Joseph." From every spire and steeple of the numerous convents and churches streamed forth Bengal lights. The convent church of Mehreruner, on an eminence over-looking the lake, looked like a great jewel in its changing colors of red and blue. The two steamers approached amid a shower of rockets like falling stars, fireworks were let off all along the shore, cannon roared their welcome, while the air was rent by the shouts of the enthusiastic multitude. Fredrickshofen was in gala dress, hung with garlands, and ablaze with colored lanterns. Their majesties landed, and repaired with their suites to the royal villa. On this occasion Mr. Jackson was presented by the king himself to the emperor. Since then he has rapidly risen in favor. First he was made Geheimrath, or privy counselor, and then the title of baron was conferred on him. Besides this he has been decorated with numerous orders, and has received many marks of the king's friendship in the way of diamonds, valuable paintings, etc.

At the last Volk's Fest, an annual fete instituted and much patronized by the Wurtemberg House for the benefit of the agricultural interests of the country, in the second carriage drawn by four white horses, with postilions in scarlet and gold livery, accompanied by three officers of high rank in gorgeous uniforms, rode the Ohio farmer's son. Those who know, say there is no telling to what height our countryman may rise, provided court jealousies are not strong enough to influence the king. Is it not well said, that truth is stranger than fiction?

"It may not be generally known," says the Philadelphia Record, "that Oscar Wilde is the nephew of the late Judge John Kingsbury Elgee, of Rapides, La. This gentleman was an Irishman by birth, and came to Louisiana when quite young, and amassed there a considerable fortune. A brilliant lawyer, he was candidate for chief justice of the state against Judge Merrick before the war, but he was defeated. He was also a member of the Louisiana Secession Convention. Judge Elgee died in New Orleans in 1864. He had purchased the well-known Withers plantation, just below Fort Adams, for nearly $1,000,000. After his decease, Mr. Withers regained possession of this property, only a portion of the purchase money having been paid, owing to the war. Subsequently Mr. Withers removed from New Orleans, and is now living in this city. These facts are published in the latest received New Orleans Picayune, and it need only be added now that Mr. Wilde's friends have a conviction that he has somehow a claim on the Louisiana property, and that the lawyers with whom he has consulted are of the opinion that he 'has a case.' This is quite a romantic turn of affairs, and should the young æsthete really succeed in obtaining any considerable portion of the property, he will go back to the old country with something in hand of more value in a material sense than his favorite lily."

Col. Fitzgibbon was, many years, colonial agent at London for the Canadian government, and was wholly dependent upon remittances from Canada for his support. On one occasion these remittances failed to arrive, and as there was no cable in those days, he was compelled to write to his Canadian friends to know the reason of the delay. Meanwhile he had just one sovereign to live upon. He found that he could live upon sixpence per day, or about twelve and a half cents of our money—four pennyworths of bread, one pennyworth of milk, and one pennyworth of sugar. He made pudding of some of the bread and sugar, which served for breakfast, dinner and supper, the milk being reserved for the last meal. When his remittances arrived about a month afterward, he had five shillings left of his sovereign, and he liked his frugal diet so well that he kept it up for over two years, possibly longer. Twelve cents a day is certainly a small amount to expend for food; but a man in Minnesota, about three years ago, worried through a whole year on $10. He lived on "Johnny cake."

"You picked the pecans on Onion creek, you say?" said an Austin reporter to a young man on a wagon filled with pecans. "Yes, sir," he replied, "that's where they came from." "Many up there?" "Plenty of them." "Believe I'll try a few," quizzed the reporter, taking a big handful of the pecans. "I'll sell you a whole peck for fifty cents," said the man, with swelling eyes. "Only want a few. Say, do you know any news?" "Not a bit, sir; everything is dull up our way." "Don't you know anything?" "Well, I believe I did hear some news yesterday." "What was it?" asked the reporter, cracking a pecan. "There was a man got eighteen buckshot in him near where I lived." "Who shot him?" "I did." "What did you shoot him for?" asked the reporter, aghast. "For stealing some of my pecans out of my wagon," said the countryman, reaching under the seat for his shot-gun. The reporter hastily replaced the pecans in the wagon, and after calling the countryman "Colonel," disappeared around the corner.—Texas Siftings.

A few days ago a little Oil City girl was taken sick, and her parents called a doctor whom she did not like. "Are you sick, Gracie?" asked the M. D., as he bent over his little patient. The little lady looked at him a moment in the utmost disdain, and then, in a tone of the deepest sarcasm, replied, as she turned her face from him, "Well, I should think you ought to know. Do you suppose I am lying here in bed and taking your horrid old medicine for the fun of it?" The doctor wilted.—Oil City Derrick.

FIREMEN'S BALL.—The firemen's ball given at Turn Halle last night as all others given by them, was well conducted and largely attended. Everything possible was done by the several floor managers to make the affair pass off pleasantly and prevent anything marring the enjoyment of those present. The music was good and of course furnished its share to the pleasure of the evening. During the evening a handsome gold medal was presented to Chief Engineer W A Hart with a neat address by W S Chapman in behalf of Mrs H M Kelly bearing the following inscription: "From Mrs H M Kelly to Wm A Hart chief engineer P F D for gallant services rendered by the department Jan 1882, in which her property was saved destruction from fire in adjoining buildings." The affair was a financial success.

THIRTY DEGREES BELOW.—A gentleman who returned last night from Ventnor Idaho said to an OREGONIAN reporter that the weather here was hot as compared with the blizzard at Lake Pen d Oreille. Friday night the mercury was 30 below zero, but the next morning had risen to 18 above. Work of all kinds was suspended. The batteries in the telegraph office at Sand point were frozen solid. Lake Pen d'Oreille west of the long bridge, was frozen solid to the depth of four to eight inches, and teams expected to cross this morning. This is probably the same Euroclydon which was felt here Friday and Saturday and no doubt the weather now is milder.

FIRE AT TANGENT.—A correspondent writing from Tangent Linn Co, under date of yesterday, says: The large store building owned by J F Beard and occupied by Mrs L L Moses as a grocery store at this place, was consumed by fire last night about 9 o clock. The structure was a two story building, and when the fire was first discovered the upper story of the building was in one solid mass of flames. Mrs Moses' loss is estimated at $400. No insurance. The building is said to be insured. The origin of the fire is supposed to be a defective flue.

SENT UP.—Isaac Tamkin, known here as Ike "Longstreet," was convicted at Nevada City, Cal, on the 16th of manslaughter for killing one McClelland, and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Tamkin came here in 1872 from Virginia City and opened a saloon called the St. Nicholas on Alder street. The house was closed by the sheriff for debt, and "Longstreet" became the worst kind of a bunko sharper. He has now gone where he can do but little mischief for some time to come.

ROBBERY.—Maurice Nelson, who has the reputation of being "crooked," was arrested yesterday afternoon charged with stealing $12 50 from George Minters, an old farmer, whom he evidently had drugged and piloted into the National hotel. Nelson got on such friendly terms with his victim that he embraced Minters in the bar room, and slipped his wallet from his pantaloons pocket. This was witnessed by the barkeeper, J. H. Huey, who caused Nelson's arrest.

FALSE ALARM.—Another false alarm of fire was turned in from box 6 this morning at a quarter to one by means of a counterfeit key. The department responded, including No 1's, who turned out with horses. It is hoped that the authorities will be able to ascertain who make and use the false keys, and that they will get the extreme penalty of the law for this hoodlum practice.

ASSAULT.—On the trial of Patrick Lynch and Frank Carroll, charged with assault with intent to commit robbery upon Myers, who tends bar at Prang's saloon, in the circuit court, yesterday, the jury brought in a verdict of simple assault. The prosecution was represented by Caples and Mulkey, and the defendants by J A Campbell. They were fined $50 each.

DEATH.—W. R. Dean died at his home, near Skippanon, on the 19th, having been failing in health for some time past. He was about fifty years of age. He settled at Nehalem about 1865, where he lived till a year since. He was known as an upright, energetic, intelligent man. In 1876 he was a joint representative from Clatsop and Tillamook counties.

THE STUBBORN COAL HEAVERS.—Barney Hughes and Christian McKenna, the two coal heavers who refused to work on the steamer Umatilla last Friday, were tried in the U. S circuit court yesterday. McKenna was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the county jail and Hughes to three weeks' incarceration.

ANTI-POLYGAMY MEETING.—This afternoon at 1 o'clock, the meeting called to invite united action against Mormonism will take place at Y. M. C. A. Hall. The attendance of those who desire to wipe out this blot on the republic is earnestly requested.

ST STEPHEN'S CHAPEL.—This being Ash-Wednesday or the first day of lent, divine service will be held in the chapel corner of Fourth and Madison streets, at 11 o'clock, when the Rt. Rev. Bishop Morris will deliver the sermon. Seats free.

ASSIGNMENT.—Yesterday J. Wagner, the grocer, made an assignment to J W Brazee for the benefit of creditors. His liabilities are about $11,000.

WRECKED ON THE BAR.

The British Bark "Corsica" Outward Bound, Strikes Seven Times and Founders.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

ASTORIA, Feb 21.—The British bark Corsica outward bound foundered off the Columbia bar this morning. Following is Capt Vesey's statement: Left Fort Stevens anchorage at 11 A M yesterday in charge of a licensed pilot, the tug Astoria towing. We were drawing 19 feet 6 inches; bar apparently smooth, no breakers; wind light N E to S W; set all sail; [illegible] canvas; proceeded favorably to the bar from the channel; after reaching bar found a heavy swell setting in from the southwest. In crossing we struck several times. After striking a second time I asked the pilot to take the ship back. He said if I attempt it you will lose your ship. Sounded pumps, found 24 inches water. All hands set to work at the pumps. The sea now got very rough, the ship pitching bows under. I asked tug to lay by me; water was increasing on pumps and gaining at the rate of 16 inches an hour. The tug Fearless now came alongside and lay by me—the tug Astoria proceeding to Astoria. I inquired if there was any place to beach the ship or if they could tow me inside to save cargo; received negative answer. At 7 P M there was seven feet of water in the hold, with two pumps going; ordered two ship's boats out astern to lay by. At 9 30 there was [illegible] inches of water. At 10 10 I was satisfied we could not keep the ship free, there being a heavy sea running, taking her decks, and the ship was laboring heavily. It was very dark. After consultation I ordered all hands into the boats. I then followed and boarded the Fearless, which at my request still lay by the ship. One boat was at [illegible] alongside the tug. The wind by this time had gone down almost to a calm, the swell abating. The ship kept afloat longer than I expected. At [illegible] A M she foundered, Cape Disappointment bearing N [illegible], about 12 miles distant; steamed all round but saw no vestige of her; returned to Astoria with all hands saved.

[A private dispatch says that the Corsica struck seven times, three times very heavily. The Carnegie was towed out immediately ahead of her and the Stirlingshire only a short distance behind. Neither one of these vessels touched. Capt Jessen, bar pilot of the steamship Oregon, said to an OREGONIAN reporter that the bar was remarkably smooth when he crossed in at noon, shortly after the Corsica had weighed anchor.

The Corsica was a wooden vessel of 776 tons register built in 1869, and owned by John S Hatfield & Co, of Glasgow. She was overhauled and repaired at Quebec in 1879, and was in good condition. She arrived here Jan 2d in ballast from Buenos Ayres, consigned to Henry Hewett & Co and chartered by Sibson Church & Co. Her cargo consisted of 43,867 bushels Walla Walla wheat valued at $46,838. It was sold to a French firm and insured for £7140 in the Commercial Union and £3000 in the London Provincial.]

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

Statement of the Captain of the Tug—The Accident Attributable to Tidal Waves—Necessity for a Tidal Station.

[REGULAR CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]

ASTORIA, Feb 20

The tug Astoria arrived in port this evening just too late to wire you the particulars of the injury sustained by the bark Corsica in crossing the bar this afternoon and which will in all probability result in a total loss of both vessel and cargo. From Capt Dan McVicar, in command of the Astoria, I have received the following statement: "Took hold of the Corsica about half past ten o clock, put Pilot Hansen aboard and run slow waiting for the tide to make, ship drawing 19 6, went through the cut-off into the north channel with a fair wind about northeast, Corsica had her top-sails and top-gallant sails set. Everything looked favorable and the bar was apparently smooth. crossed the bar about 1 40 P M, hauled the ship in the trough of the sea as much as possible to prevent her from pitching too much, in crossing, three heavy swells rolled in and the vessel thumped three times; the first time I noticed she struck heavily. Following in our wake was the tug Fearless with the iron bark Carnegie in tow and astern of her, about an hour behind was the Brenham with the iron ship Stirlingshire, drawing 19 feet 6 inches. Both these vessels crossed over the bar safely and put to sea. After getting outside went alongside the Corsica and inquired if there was any damage done, was told that she was leaking and had about two feet of water in her hold, and was asked to send boat alongside to take the captain's wife and child off. Told the captain I would take them all off or stay by him if he thought there was any danger of the ship sinking. Said he preferred I should go up with his wife and he would stay aboard and see the end, if the Fearless would lay by him all night. Stayed by him until half-past three, when the Fearless came up and it was arranged for her to stay by the Corsica so I came up with the captain's wife and little baby three weeks old. When I left the captain sounded the pumps, and said there was 5 feet of water in her. I then advised him to leave her as the wind had hauled round to the S W, and a heavy sea was setting in and ship laboring heavily. He still insisted on remaining to see the end. It is my opinion that the vessel will founder at 11 or 12 o'clock to night. There was not at any time, after crossing the bar, any possibility of towing the vessel in again as we came over on the top of the tide, and it soon commenced to ebb with an increasing swell, rolling in from the S W, the bar commencing to break. The captain of the Carnegie signaled Capt Vesy of the Corsica to know if he wanted any assistance, he answered, no, and the Carnegie then sailed away."

Capt McVicar says that at the stage of the tide in which he crossed the bar, in the channel where the Corsica thumped, soundings show 28 feet in the hollow of the sea, if smooth it would be 27. That from some unexplained cause there are occasions when three or four (generally three) heavy swells, the rise and fall of which is far above the average, will come rolling in one after the other across the bar, is a well known fact to those who have made tidal observations at the mouth of the Columbia. Mr. Louis Wilson, long in charge of the U. S tidal station when it was in operation here, can verify this fact, and, what is of still more importance, he asserts that the tidal guage gave unerring indications of the approach of these tidal waves, soon enough to warn pilots that at such a particular time, no matter how smooth the bar might appear, it would not be safe to cross out with a loaded vessel. The present occurrence is but a second edition of the Nimbus disaster, still fresh in the memory of readers of THE OREGONIAN.

As appropriate to the subject of this communication, permit me in closing to allude to the discontinuance of the tidal station by the U. S government at this point. It cost the government, I believe, $900 a year to maintain it; certainly not more. It was in charge of a thoroughly competent gentleman who was for years in the U. S. coast service. So accurately could he at all times describe not only the present condition of the bar, but what it would be for hours to come, that the late Commodore Conner, as well as Capt. Bolles and other steamship commanders, never failed to consult Mr. Louis Wilson on their arrival from Portland as to its condition and acted accordingly. Since its discontinuance our steamships have made scores of trips down to the bar only to return to their moorings at the dock or anchorage off Sand Island because they could not cross out, entailing a large unnecessary expense for fuel, besides giving to the hundreds of passengers an inside, out experience they would gladly have been spared. Beside all this the re-establishing of it would be an invaluable boon to the hundreds of fishermen who in the salmon season take their lives in their hands every night they go down to the treacherous neighborhood of the bar to fish. Remember that fatal May night two years ago when from twenty to thirty hardy fishermen found a watery grave. With the tidal station then in operation, Mr. Wilson could, by the unerring indications of his instruments, have sounded a warning which, if heeded, would have deterred those men from exposing themselves to the fury of the elements on that disastrous occasion. Efforts have been made to induce the government to re-establish the tidal station here. These efforts ought to be renewed. The tidal house and the instruments are still here. Mr Wilson, the capable operator, is still here, and though now engaged in business, could no doubt be induced to again keep the records for the government and the Smithsonian institute, as he did so efficiently in the years gone by.

THE McGIBENYS IN NEW YORK

The New York Herald of Jan 31 has the following: A novel entertainment was given in Steinway hall last night by a section of the McGibeny Family. The section of the family at present [illegible] for the public consists of Mr and Mrs McGibeny and eight of their children, Viola, Florie, Allie, [illegible], Hugh, Victor and Dockie. It is [illegible] that their [illegible] the McGibenys [illegible] profession. It has already been related in the Herald how the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children had insisted that certain very juvenile members of the company should not appear last night. Allie, Florie and Dockie McGibeny, aged respectively nine, seven and six years, were yesterday introduced to Mayor Grace. Mr Elbridge T Gerry of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was expected to be present at this meeting, but did not appear. His honor, after shaking hands with the children and chatting pleasantly with Mr McGibeny, Sr, decided not to allow Dockie and Florie to take part in the entertainment as they were too tender in years.

Mr McGibeny, Sr, opened the entertainment of last evening with an address in which he stated that owing to several unforeseen and unhappy circumstances the programme would have to undergo many alterations. He related briefly but with much feeling how he had run against the society quoted above and how the mayor had forbidden Dockie to toy with the cymbals and had prohibited Florie from worrying the big drum. But this was not all. A trunk containing the children's costumes and a cornet had been left in Philadelphia. Apologies were made for the children having to appear in their street dresses and also for the absent cornet which was to have played a part in the concert. Mr McGibeny concluded his remarks by stating with evident pride that his children were happy, healthy, well fed and well clothed. The audience, he said, could see for themselves if they were happy and healthy looking and well clothed. If any one thought they were not well fed he was invited to run round to the hotel where the McGibeneys are stopping at meal times. From the applause that followed this little speech it was evident that Mr McGibeny had the sympathies of the audience.

The opening piece on the programme was a chorus, [illegible] by Fecher, which brought out the full strength of the company minus Florie and Dockie. Its talented and [illegible] pretty instantly made an impression on the audience. The young McGibenys, as bright and intelligent a set of youngsters as one would wish to see, sang in excellent time. Mr McGibeny led the chorus with a fine soprano voice and her husband put in a good deal of tenor. The pieces that followed, consisting of quartets for brass instruments and strings, orchestral pieces for the full band, solos and vocal quartets, showed the members of this clever family to be possessed of real musical talent and considerable intelligence. The young people's accomplishments are extremely varied and most of them seem equally at home with a violin, cornet or saxophone. Viola and Hugh played with Mr Max Liebling the movement from Mozart's Symphony in E flat with wonderfully nice taste and expression, and the brass quartette, "Hunter's Farewell," (Mendelssohn), given by Frank, Hugh, Victor and Fred was one of the gems of the evening. The full pieces were altogether too noisy owing to the preponderance of brass instruments and the vigorous manner in which Allie "doubled up on the drum and cymbals. Mrs McGibeny, who sings in admirable style sang a Scotch ditty with much success. Miss Alice's attempt at singing a ballad was very painful to listen to, and a quintet of strings did not go well. Mr. Frank McGibeny, who has lost his right arm, played a cornet solo very cleverly. Florie and Dockie appeared and lisped out apologies for not fulfilling their part of the programme. The "Boccaccio" march closed the entertainment. Mr McGibney announced that Florie and Dockie although they were not allowed to perform, would take their places in the band. Florie arrived with a huge drumstick, took up a defiant position by the big drum and Dockie held a cymbal in each hand. After half a dozen bars had been played "bang" went the drum, and little Florie continued to beat that instrument with as much vigor as if she were laying into a member of the society that had succeeded till then in stopping her performance. Dockie followed suit with the cymbals, but weakened somewhat before the march was ended. There was a good sized audience present and the performances of these clever children, which were for the most part admirable, were warmly received, the insubordinate actions of the two infants in the company in the last piece drawing a storm of applause.

MINING NOTES.

Jacksonville Times

The Applegate Gravel Co is piping and expects to make a clean up soon.

Some of the large hydraulic companies are now cleaning out their ditches.

The Squaw Lake Ditch Co is completing its reservoir and getting ready for active operations.

[illegible] will build a ditch several miles long from [illegible], the water from Palmer creek to the red hills.

Wm Q Brown, formerly of Althouse, is now in Douglas county on a prospecting tour in the interest of California capitalists.

The weather in the northern portion of the county it seems has been much more temperate than here, and the miners all have plenty of water.

Many miners are able to do some work during the day with the aid of reservoirs, but little effective mining has been done anywhere as yet.

Capt H Kelly returned from [illegible] creek this week and states that the miners of that section are taking advantage of an excellent supply of water.

H L Nidav of Lucky Queen P O is engaged in working the Trullinger mine this winter and says the prospects for a favorable run were never better.

The cold snap does not seem to have prevailed continuously over the entire county, as Chappel & Co, Gin Lin and other miners along Applegate have been busily at work for some time past with a good supply of water.

The cold spell is about over and the miners will all soon be busily at work, as the ground, which is full of moisture, has thawed out and water is beginning to be plentiful. A favorable spring, with plenty of rain is also anticipated, and the unusually large amount of snow in the mountains will prolong the mining season. The prospects for a good run are certainly not as gloomy as they might be.

OVER THE WAY.

No fresh young beauty, laughing eyed,
Who reckons lovers by the score,
But just a sweet old maid who died
While I was yet in pinafore.

She lived upon the shady side
Of that old-fashioned country street,
A spreading chestnut greenly tried
To screen the door of her retreat.

A tiny garden, trim and square,
A snowy flight of steps above,
And sweet suggestions in the air
Of all the flowers the poets love.

Within the trellised porch there hung
A parrot in a burnished cage—
A foolish bird, whose mocking tongue
Burlesqued the piping tones of age.

A branching apple tree o'erspread
A rickety old garden seat;
No apples sure were e'er so red
Or since have tasted half as sweet!

In Memory's enchanted land,
I see the gentle spinster yet,
With watering-pot in mittened hand
Gaze proudly at her mignonette.

And when the spring had grown to June,
She'd sit beneath the apple tree,
And dream away the afternoon,
With some quaint volume on her knee.

A gray-robed vision of repose,
A pleasant thought in Quaker guise,
For truly she was one of those
Who carry heaven in their eyes.

THE CURTAIN-MAN.

BY W. J. FLORENCE.

Yes, sir; I raised and lowered the curtain in Mitchell's old Olympic theater for ten years, and many a strange sight have I seen, and many successes and failures could I tell you of.

You see, sir, we curtain men are never thought of by the public, the actors, or the authors either for the matter of that, and yet we are very necessary to the drama. Many a climax has been spoiled by an inexperienced curtain man. Many a play has been ruined by a curtain man who did not understand his business.

Yes, sir, "a slow curtain" to music must not be "rung down" a second before its time, nor a "quick curtain" mistaken for a "one-half slow."

Then again, sir, we have to change the borders of flies, and if by chance I put over a garden of foliage border on a drawing room it would look queer, wouldn't it, sir?

I remember a strange scene I witnessed over at the Olympic; it was about Christmas time in '42. We were playing fairy pieces. I forget the name of it now—Yellow Dwarf, Puss in Boots, or something of that sort. Indeed, I ought to remember it, but can't just now.

Well, sir, I came to the theater this night and took my accustomed place in the flies, ready to hoist the curtain when I got the bell. I was tired and weary, had been up all night tending my poor wife who was down with fever, and was so worn out watching I could hardly keep my eyes open. Still I managed to do my work, and I was very glad when the play was over. I let the curtain down on the "gag," and was about to put on my coat, when I got a warning bell to take the curtain up again. I mechanically seized the windlass and wound the curtain up, and looked over the railing of my gallery to see what was going on below.

A table spread with wine and edibles, for a supper was placed in the middle of the stage, and my manager, Mr. Mitchell, dressed as Vincent Crummels, was seated at the head of the table, while ranged on either side were the leading members of the company, Mary Taylor, Connie Clark, Miss Tanner, Walcot Nickerson, Edwin Conover, Horncastle, Mary Gannon and Charlotte Nickerson.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said Mr. Mitchell as he arose, glass in hand, "to-night we meet to celebrate the anniversary of our opening, and I have invited a number of friends to join our family group, and—"

"Mr. Simpson!" shouted Frank Drew, the call-boy, and the manager of the Park Theatre, thus announced, walked on the stage, and he took a seat at Mr. Mitchell's left.

"Welcome, Simpson," said Mitchell. "How goes on old Drury? Well, I hope. Fill your glass, man, and join us in a toast."

"Mr. Hamlin!" shouted the call-boy, announcing the handsome manager of the Bowery Theatre.

"Come here, Tom," said Mitchell; "sit ye here. See, at my feet, Demetrius."

"Have with you!" said Hamlin, as he seated himself on Mitchell's right, while the members of the company applanded by clapping their hands.

"I was just about to propose the continued success of our little Olympic, and long life, health and prosperity to each and every individual member of my company. We have had a very prosperous and successful season. Our plays—comedy, farce and burlesque—have been well received, and if for the future—"

At the word "future," the lights suddenly went out, except at the back of the stage, where the scene represented a large mirror on the polished surface of which was written in dull lead colored letters, "The Near Future." The company had risen to their feet, and stood looking with wonder at the strange scene. Just then the call-boy's voice was heard announcing, "Mr. Shakespeare!"

He was a thin, spare man, with an oval bald head, and clad in trunks and hose; he seemed sad, and wore a weary, disappointed look; in fact, he looked exactly as I had often seen him standing in the niche over the large door of the Park theater.

"I have come," said he, in a hoarse, hollow voice, "I have come to show you what there is in the future for your profession; for myself, alas, I am forgotten in the present, nor have I any hope for the future."

Low, weird music was now heard in the orchestra, where George Loder sat enthroned as leader.

"Look upon the mirror," said Shakespeare.

All eyes were turned towards the back of the stage; a thin mist had covered the polished surface of the glass. When it cleared away, the lookers-on beheld a man in a red shirt: he had an overcoat on his arm, a cigar in his mouth, and long shiny locks on each side of his face.

"This," said Shakespeare, "is your first great success in the future; he is a New York fireman, his name Frank Chanfrau. "Mose!" said the shade of Shakespeare. "Look at him." He moved. "Speak!" Slowly removing the cigar from his mouth, the figure turned and in a swaggery manner spoke these words, "Sykesy, take the butt!"

"Strange gibberish;" said Shakespeare, "but it will add many dollars to your treasury. Look again." The man in the red shirt had gone, and a strange object, with long side whiskers, hair parted in the middle, single eye-glass in his eye, hopped, skipped and jumped across the scene. He wore a long skirted coat, and his entire costume was modeled in the extreme of fashion.

"What is this?" said Mitchell.

"One of those things no fellow can find out, but he will be called Dundreary; and will become the fashion and live for years in both the new and old world," said Shakespeare. "See, he is going to sneeze," and with a loud "ait-choo" the figure skipped away.

An old man clad in rags and leaning on a staff now appeared on the surface of the glass; his white beard reached down to his waist, and his snow-white head was bent with age and sorrow. He looked appealingly at the company and at the wine-filled glasses on the table.

"Shall we give him a drink?" said Mitchell.

"Yes," said the shade of Shakespeare; "give him Schnapps."

As the old man raised the goblet he sadly said: "Here's your good health, and your families' good health, and may you live long and prosper." "His name is Rip Van Winkle, and will be a sterling attraction for years. Look again. An old negro with a fair-haired child sitting on his lap. "Uncle Tom and Eva," said Shakespeare, "will hold the stage for many seasons, and their names will be heard on the lips of millions yet to come."

Slow, plaintive music now filled the air, and the surface of the mirror reflected the figure of a pale-faced lad lying bleeding, while over his prostrate body stood a savage-looking man with a slung shot in his hand.

"Poor broken-hearted Bob Brierly," said Shakespeare. "He, too, will be a well remembered stage portrait in the coming time. See that old Yankee farmer; he is called Solon Shingle—and that German-looking graceful fellow is called Fritz; while that third party, with the up-raised arm, will be known as Colonel Sellers. Those are all to be famous in the future. There's millions in it," said Shakespeare, in a sad and despairing tone.

"Have you no tragedians to show?" said Manager Hamlin.

"Look again," said Shakespeare, "that is Edwin Booth. His name will be a great one. He will be famous on both continents. That heroic figure in the Roman toga is John McCullough. He will be great in his day, and loved by all.

The orchestra now struck up the Rogue's March, and—then appeared a queer old fellow, in a slouchy black hat; his trowsers were baggy, his beard was pointed, and he had a slouchy, shambling gait. "This old rascal," said Shakespeare, "will be known as the honorable Bard ———"

Loud peals of sheet iron stage thunder and flashes of lycopodium stage lightning now filled the stage, and in the general clash I awoke. I had been fast asleep and dreaming. It was broad daylight, and I crept down from my place in the flies and wended my way sorrowfully home. Dramatic Mirror.

BIRTH OF AN ELEPHANT.

A Baby Weighing 145 Pounds—Its Life Already Insured for $300,000.

New York World, Feb. 4.

When the World reporter alighted at the office of the winter quarters of Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's circus, about a mile outside of Bridgeport, Ct., yesterday, he was greeted by the cordial voice of the veteran showman. "Come to see the addition to my family, haven't you?" asked the great moral exhibitor. "Well, it is as pretty a little baby elephant as ever was seen." The old gentleman's face was refulgent with joy and contentment, and as he turned to guide his visitor to the boudoir of Queen, the mother of the second baby elephant ever born in this country, his step was as agile as that of a young man. "I'm only seventy-one years old," said Mr. Barnum, "but the other day a gentleman who did not know me very well said something of the same sort. 'I'm only thirty-three,' I told him. 'You have mistaken me for old man Barnum.'"

Queen is a little over eight feet high, weighs 6800 pounds, and is just out of her teens. She was quartered in what is known as "Elephant Hall," a room 100 feet square, having the place of honor in the center of a training ring plentifully supplied with sawdust. One of her hind legs was encircled by a strong chain some eight or nine feet long, and this was fastened to a heavy post. Beside her, and resting on particularly unsteady legs, was the female baby to which she gave birth at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening. The exact measurement of the baby was thirty inches high, thirty-six inches long, and its little trunk, which it began to use exactly seven minutes after it first saw the light, measures seven and a half inches. Its ears are folded back like a lady's cape and its tail, in its extreme thinness, was out of all proportion to its legs. In fact, it seemed to be pretty much all head and legs, the body being thin and wasted. Its eyes were red and apparently somewhat inflamed, but they were wide open. It stood upright nearly all the time, or walked slowly and tremblingly around the mass it owned as mother, but now and then, with a motion exceedingly awkward, it would bend its front knees, balance itself carefully, and then roll over helplessly among the loose hay that formed the maternal couch. At each of these mishaps the mother showed marked solicitude. Her body swayed from side to side and her trunk sought out the baby and vainly endeavored to turn her over. This caress, for the trunk of the monster seemed as tender as the hand of a woman, would invariably rouse the baby to renewed exertion; and with a turn or two more awkward perhaps than the movements which attended its lying down, it rose slowly and tremblingly to its feet. Its efforts to suckle were for a long time unavailing. The seven-inch trunk was at first the great obstacle, but later on it evidently experienced some difficulty in finding the breasts. Finally, however, it raised and curled its trunk so that it stood almost upright, and then began the first feast. Like other babies its meals were short in duration, but were numerous. While it was engaged in feeding, the mother stood without bodily motion, but at other times she shuffled from side to side as far as the length of her chain would permit, and looked resentfully upon those who stood outside the ring gazing at her and her young one. But in all her movements, whether angry or otherwise, it was evident that she never lost sight of her offspring. That happy new-comer toddled all around her, but never for a moment was it in any danger, although it seemed likely at almost any time to put its little body below the monster foot of its mother. Once the baby lay down, with its trunk folded up under its forelegs, and was evidently disposed to take a nap, but this disposition violently agitated the Queen. Later in the day the baby lay down and slept soundly, and a physician who was present remarked: "You may depend upon it that the mother's instinct taught her that it was not good for her offspring to sleep for a certain period after birth, and it is to this that I attribute extreme watchfulness." While the pigmy slept the giantess was on guard.

"You may think I am awfully enthusiastic," said Mr. Barnum, "but I feel almost as glad at the appearance of that youngster as if it were a child of my own. Indeed, Mrs. Barnum said almost as much to me this morning. I offered when it was born to pay $1000 a week for fifty-two weeks to insure its life for $300,000, and the arrangement was perfected this morning. The risks have been taken, one-half in New York and one-half in Hartford by insurance men. They were acting individually, and not in their official capacity. The papers will be ready to-night. I received an offer from an enterprising manager of New York of $1000 a day to exhibit the mother and baby for three weeks. I intend to let the little thing gain her full strength, and will not exhibit her publicly until I open in New York on the 13th of March, in Madison Square Garden."

Prof. George Arstingstall, who has charge of the twenty-two elephants belonging to the show, attended the Queen throughout her confinement, and sat up with her on Thursday night as did Mr. H. H. Cross, an artist, who has had a long experience with elephants. The latter described the birth of the baby very vividly. At 6 P. M., he said, it became evident that the event which had so long been expected was close at hand. Queen was restless and uneasy, swaying from side to side, and groaning at intervals as if in intense pain. This paroxysm lasted for ten minutes or more, during which time Mr. Arstingstall spoke soothingly to her, but without attempting to approach her. It should be said that her temper is naturally bad, and that it would not have been altogether safe, even for one who had great control over her in ordinary moods, to place himself within reach of her trunk. From 6:10 P. M. until 7 P. M., Queen was apparently at ease, but at the latter hour she was seized with another paroxysm of pain and tore wildly at the chain that bound her. Her trunk was constantly vibrating, and once she wound around the post to which her chain was attached, and tried desperately to pull it out of the ground. Her next and final paroxysm was at 8 P. M., when she tugged so violently at her chain and bellowed so outrageously that most of those who had gathered fled incontinently. Eight minutes later the baby was born. To cut the umbilical cord the mother took the baby between her forelegs, and with a dexterous motion of one of them accomplished her purpose.

Mr. Cross said: "The baby weighed 145 pounds, and was covered with thick, flossy hair. It was first as blue as indigo, but now, as you see, it is mouse color. Its vitality was wonderful. I don't think it had seen the light more than fifteen minutes before it stood upright, looking around as though surprised at its queer surroundings. Almost its first motion was a search for the breast of the mother, but this it failed to find. During the few minutes of its insensibility Queen rolled it gently to and fro with her trunk, handling it quite as gently as any nurse ever handled a baby. The baby had two well-developed teeth. It began to suckle about two hours after birth. I never saw any animal suffer more intensely than Queen did just after the birth. The period of gestation in this case was about twenty months."

The baby, Mr. Arstingstall said, was sired by Chief, a formidable looking elephant about eleven and a half feet high. Ever since the birth of the baby—which Mr. Barnum has christened America, the other baby elephant, born in Philadelphia, March 10, 1880, bearing the name of Columbia—the other elephants in the hall, numbering twenty, have been in a state of great excitement. They have exhibited a curiosity almost human to see the new comer, and have been harder to control than usual. Early in the morning it is customary to release them, in order that they may get their morning drink at a large tank. Ordinarily they enjoy this drink hugely, but yesterday not one of the twenty went to the tank direct, each making his way toward the mother and baby in the center of the ring. Columbia, who is now two years old and weighs over 1000 pounds, reached the side of the Queen and was ready for a game of romps when Mr. Arstingstall removed her.

The birth of America not having been anticipated on Thursday evening, several scientists who had requested permission to be present on this occasion could not be summoned in time. Of these Prof. Henry C. Chapman, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, arrived yesterday. Some of the milk of the mother was sent for analysis to Dr. Chas. Doremus, of New York, and Prof. S. H. Jenkins, of Yale College.

FEES OF DOCTORS.

The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3 00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1000 and all the year's sickness.—Post
